CAIRO.

MARRIAGE OF MR. R. A. WILSON.

The Wesleyan Church, Cairo, was the scene of a pretty little wedding on the 22nd inst, when Mr. R. Augustus Wilson was married to Miss Catherine Estella Gayle. The Rev. Pitt officiated at the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by Mr. W. A. Lawrence, looked lovely in her dress of ivory satin richly trimmed with chiffon and Bebe ribbon with semi-court train and tulle veil over a spray of orange blossoms. The bridesmaids were Miss M. L. Gauntlett (chief), Miss Angelina King (sister of the bride) Agatha Richards Irene Levy and Louisa Tomlinson. They looked gay in their dresses of cream muslin and pink sashes. After the marriage knot was tied, the parties retired to the bride's residence, where a sumptuous dinner was awaiting them. Among the friends present were the Rev. Pitt, who proposed the health of the bride and bridegroom.

RUSSIAN VILLAGERS.

Not a Hair Left on Their Heads and Faces.
A story comes here from the town of Dubovo, in the southern part of Russia, which shows how strong a hold superstition still has on the lower classes of the Russian people.
One morning an elderly man appeared in the street of Dubovo with a beardless face and a head shaven as close as a billiard ball. The inhabitants of the town, which is scarcely more than a village, to their surprise recognized in him the "Starosta" or headman of the town.
A meeting of the Common Council was immediately called to consider whether a headman without any beard or hair could be allowed to hold office. The headman, Taras Artasoff, appeared before the meeting and declared that the shaving of face and head was a patriotic duty and that in the night Abraham had appeared to him and told him that hair on the head was a covenant of original sin, and that if Russia desired victory in the present war her sons must sacrifice their hair, mustaches, beards and eyebrows and even pull out their eyelashes. Each hairless Russian meant death to a hundred Japanese.
The council thereupon immediately decided to imitate the patriotic headman, and the next day every man, woman and child in the district was absolutely hairless.
A few men who were too proud to sacrifice their whiskers were expelled from the town and all their property confiscated by the council.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
Music for Russian Workmen.
"The laboring man in Russia, though in rougher surroundings than found in other countries for the same class, has undoubtedly compensations which serve to make his life happier than could be imagined under such conditions," says a writer in Social Service. "One is love of music, cultivated and enlarged by the fine rendering of the anthems and chants of the services of the churches. The choral singing of men and boys in some of the smaller hamlets is indeed so rich and finished in style as to be a constant source of wonder to all travelers. Soothing and delightful also is the delicious melody of the church bells which render hourly their music; and musical as well as cheering even the tinkling of the bells on the harness of the horses. No whip is needed by the drivers who urge their beautiful ponies only by the exhilarating sound of national or popular airs sung in their rich chanting tones."
Butter for a Bump.
While mothers' kisses are supposed to take the soreness out of all sorts of hurts and bruises, even this sovereign specific will not keep a bump from turning black and blue. If a bump is well buttered soon after it is made, the skin, it is said, will not change color. A woman who did not believe it, but tried it all the same, says her children have been saved many ugly marks by means of this simple and inexpensive remedy.
One Thing More to Show.
For two hours a fashionable lady kept the draper exhibiting his goods, and at the end of that period she sweetly asked: "Are you sure you have shown me everything you have?"
"No, madam," said the draper, "I have yet an old account in my ledger I'll gladly show you."
He did not need to show any more.
New England Shoes.
New England still retains her pre-eminence in the boot and shoe industry, but three of her six states, including Maine, rank lower in the comparative value of their product than they did twenty years ago, while of the others only Vermont has made a gain in comparative rank.

Country customers will please include in their remittance the cost of postage, equal to 25 cents for two pounds.

Flower Service at the Wesleyan Church. THE EDITOR Limon Weekly News. Sir, A few weeks ago I noticed an article in your widely circulated and interesting paper from the pen of "Jan Naj" dealing with the subject of a good sermon delivered at St. Mark's Church, by Rev. H. N. Van. I am not a Theologian and therefore I do not intend to grapple with that subject, but as a "Musical Man" I now intend to bring to your notice, that part of Church worship, which to a very large extent, sneers up the Service and hushes life into both preacher and hearers and that is "Good music" coupled with good singing.

Enclosed please find programme, hoping you will publish same. For the cause that needs assistance For its future in the distance And the good you stand to do. I am dear Mr. Editor, Your obedient servant "A Devotee of Music."

THE YALU RIVER

BY CYRUS C. ADAMS.

THE hostile armies have first confronted one another along the shores of Korea Bay. Much history has been written on these coast lands between Ping Yang and the Yalu River, and other chapters are to be added.

Observe the Yalu River in this pic-north. They are looking over a plain extending far south, very fertile, and one of the best farming regions. It is broken by mountain spurs, which extend to or nearly to the sea, but it is one of the few parts of Korea that may be traversed with comparative ease.—Collier's Weekly.

Each City's Odor.

A European writer has discovered that each city has its own peculiar odor. Paris is pervaded by a faint odor of charcoal. London smells of soot. The aroma of garlic greets the new arrival at Calais. Moscow has a perfume of its own, cranberries of peculiar pungency. St. Petersburg suggests old leather boots.

proper bolts or connections could be made. This, of course, made it necessary to have a jib upon the top of the travelers, thus facilitating the handling of the frames beyond those being held in place. It was the breaking of one of these travelers that caused the death of eight workers, the crane, bridge iron and men being precipitated into the water beneath.

Day by day this work continued, the travelers being advanced with the progress of the bridge until the last span was raised in place and found to fit exactly. It was a wonderful sight to witness these two long outstretched arms having practically nothing to hold them up.

The centre span is 812 feet long and

JUST A DOG STORY

HOW PETE MADE FRIENDS WITH FIVE TRAVELERS TO THE SACRAMENTO.

From Noah Brooks' "The Coming and the Going of Pete" in St. Nicholas.

HE came to us in one of the solitary places of the Platte River Valley, in western Nebraska. There were five of us, four young men and a boy of fifteen, on our way across the continent from the Missouri to the Sacramento. In those days—for this was many, many years ago—there was no way of crossing the great plains but that of following the trail afoot, with ox teams, horseback, or other simple means of travel. In crossing the plains, men first had the trackless wilderness to penetrate; next came the trace, showing where a few wayfarers had passed; then the trail was formed by many feet turned toward the West; after that the wagon track made by the emigrant wagons of gold seekers bound for California; the stage road came soon after, and, last of all, was the iron railway. We were on the trail as it was turning into a wagon track.

Late one afternoon, just as we had camped on the grassy banks of the river, a large yellow dog came out of the underbrush and regarded us with some anxiety. Being encouraged by a few kindly calls, for it seemed queer to see a dog wandering in that lonely and uninhabited place, he came into camp, forlorn and suspicious.

He was tall, coarse-haired, with foxy ears and club-shaped tail. We tried him with various names that are common in dog history—Bose, Tray, Duke, Turk, and so on; but to none of these did he make reply until some one said "Pete!" At this he gave a diffident little jump and a bark. Thereafterward he was Pete, and Pete he remained until the end of the story.

As we happened to have plenty of buffalo meat in camp that night, Pete was given a good supper. He was ravenously hungry, and while he was eagerly gnawing a bone he suddenly dropped it with a yelp of pain. Going to the poor beast to see what was the trouble, I passed my hand along his jaw and found a lump under the skin, as if some part of the jawbone were broken and out of place. The gentle pressure of my hand put the bone into place again, and Pete, with a grunt of satisfaction, went on with his supper. After that, as long as he was with us, Pete would run to me whimpering whenever his ravenous feeding brought on his grief. As he laid his nose on my knee I pressed back the troublesome lump, and Pete ceased his complaints. But he learned to be careful of his wounded jaw, and avoided wrenching it when gnawing his food.

One of the wayfarers whom we occasionally met on the trail toward the setting sun, seeing me perform this painless little surgical operation for Pete some weeks after he had come to us, said that he knew the dog. His master, he said, was a brutal fellow, and being angry with the dog one day, struck him violently on the head with the butt of his rifle. The dog fled howling from the camp, and probably in this way became a wanderer until he made our acquaintance and found friends.

We all liked Pete, and he was on the most intimate terms with all in the camp; but there were two reasons why he attached himself chiefly to me; I had first helped him in trouble, and had charge of the "grab" in the camp. On the plains, and in fact in all camps, the food is never known by any name but that of grab. From my hands, usually, came the food that was so welcome to Pete. One kind of food which we all liked was known as flapjacks; and Pete liked flapjacks as well as the rest of the camp did. But the labor of cooking them, one at a time in the frying pan, was too great to make us willing that Pete should have many. To turn a flapjack over in a pan, it is necessary to loosen it a little around the edges and toss it in the air in such a way that when it comes down in the pan it will be with the baked side up, and to do this well requires experience. Sometimes while the cake or flapjack was turning in the air the wind would catch it and it would light on the ground instead of in the pan—that flapjack, broken and gritty with sand, was Pete's. And he would solemnly and wistfully sit by the fire watching the cooking of the flapjacks, and waiting for the accidents that were to give him a share of the good things. After a while he became so expert in the art of catching the flying cakes that he knew just when one was going to strike the ground, and his jaws snapped on it before it finally landed in the sand. It might be a pretty hot morsel for Pete, but he never complained.

Our house was a tent, taken down every morning before we turned our faces westward again, and pitched every night on a soft and level spot of earth. Pete was never allowed to sleep in the tent with us, much to his surprise and discontent; but he discovered where I slept near the wall of the tent, and made himself a bed as near the canvas as he could get, and kept watch all night.

When we reached the alkali country Pete suffered a great deal from sore feet. The alkali makes the spring water unfit for drinking, and makes rough and dry the skins of persons traveling over the trail. After a while Pete's feet were so sore that we made him ride in the wagon.

In Salt Lake City we camped on the edge of the town in an open, grassy square, called Emigrant Square, as directed by the officers of the place. One fine morning we awoke to find our oxen gone, although they had been carefully chained to our wagon wheels the night before. How had anybody unchained the cattle without making any noise? And why did not Pete give the alarm when the thieves came to our camp? Pete! Sure enough, where was Pete? He was nowhere to be found. In vain we searched through the camps of other emigrants; neither the dog nor the oxen were to be seen. The loss of the cattle was most severe, of course, for without oxen we could not go on to California; but to lose Pete was like losing one of our party.

Next day we discovered the cattle in an enclosure that had been covered with brush, as if to hide what was within. The owner of the place said he found the oxen running at large, and he had taken them up to wait for the rightful owners to appear. He knew nothing about a yellow dog with foxy ears. We thought it best to get out of Salt Lake City at once, and, yoking our cattle to the wagon, we started for Box Elder, a little settlement to the north of the town. With heavy hearts we jogged along across the fields until we struck the road leading to the settlement. Turning back to look at Salt Lake City, which is a very beautifully situated place near the Great Salt Lake, we saw something leaping through the tall grass of the meadows below us. It came leaping and bounding, rising and falling in the waving windrows of grass, only half visible to us on the road above. "It's Pete!" cried the boy of the camp. "It's dear old Peter, as sure as I'm alive!"

Day of the Farm Horse is Over.

The day of the horse as a heavy laborer on American farms has ended, and the machinery will more and more be operated by one of the three motive powers—steam, gasoline and electricity. The trackless trolley farms have to-day become an experimental investment which thoroughly work out all that was claimed for them. With cheaper power derived from the rivers and waterfalls, electricity will extend to all parts of the country, and small and large farming implements will be operated thereby. Electric power is cheaper than horse power, even when ordinary fuel is used to operate the engines, and when the power can be supplied from some river it will be far cheaper than steam in any form.—Washington Post.

An Old Phrase Knocked Out.

"In season," a phrase constantly recurring in old cookery books, has now almost lost the significance as regards vegetables. Particularly is this the case with potatoes. You may, if you please, get new potatoes all the year round now, but in the English market the foreign varieties are most plentiful from November to April, before the native product is dug. A good many of the potatoes sold in the London markets during this period come from Malta, which raises two crops each year. The first is dug early in November, the second early in February. Curiously enough the seed comes entirely from Ireland—an instance of imperial reciprocity which is not generally known.—London Chronicle.

Limited Sight of Reptiles.

Reptiles' sight is generally good, and is probably their most acute sense, yet their vision is very limited. Crocodiles cannot distinguish a man at distances over ten times their length. Fish see for only short distances. The vision of serpents is poor; the boa constrictor, for example, can see no farther than one-third his own length. Some snakes see no farther than one-eighth of their length. Frogs are better endowed and see twenty times their own length. The hearing of nearly all reptiles is even worse than their sight. Most of them are deaf, especially boa constrictors. "Deaf as an adder" represents a careful observation of our ancestors.

A Menagerie at Sea.

There is now a floating menagerie voyaging from Melbourne to London. It contains some thousands of Australian birds and animals. A rare species of "wallaby," or dwarf kangaroo, is coming to the Hon. Walter Rothschild, the most enthusiastic of amateur animal collectors. A family of emus is bound for the Zoological Gardens, Leipzig. James Cooper, the owner of the menagerie, make an annual excursion of this sort from Australia to England, but his present cargo is the biggest he has ever brought. It embraces kangaroos, emus, wallabies, black swans, white cockatoos, all sorts of parrots and pigeons, ducks, finches, cassowaries, opossums and magpies.—London Chronicle.

The First Coal in England.

It was to supply the wants of smiths and lime burners that English coal began to be systematically dug about A. D. 1200. This mineral fuel suited the requirements of their crafts even better than wood. An unwonted and widespread demand for fuel for these purposes doubtless sprang up at this period in connection with the numerous feudal castles and ecclesiastical buildings which were being erected throughout the kingdom. Not only were smiths and lime burners the sole patrons of coal at this early stage, but for a long time subsequently they continued to be its principal consumers.—Contemporary Review.

One Thing More to Show.

For two hours a fashionable lady kept the draper exhibiting his goods, and at the end of that period she sweetly asked: "Are you sure you have shown me everything you have?" "No, madam," said the draper, "I have yet an old account in my ledger I'll gladly show you." He did not need to show any more.—New Yorker.

The Largest Cantilever Bridge in the United States

AT PITTSBURG comes to the front in the engineering world. This time it is the completion of the largest cantilever suspension bridge in the United States, and the second largest in the world, the largest being over the Firth of Forth, in Scotland. The American bridge is that of the Wabash Railroad, which spans the Monongahela River at Pittsburgh. After two corps of engineers had figured out the measurements of the centre span with only the difference of 15-64th of an inch, work was at once begun upon the two large stone piers located on either side of the river. In order to provide for the great force to be placed upon the shore piers, two anchors, strong enough to support the centre span, were placed under ground at a depth of sixty feet, the arms being connected by solid steel frame. On top of each pier is a huge tower.

Extending from the top of the towers is the top chord, which has a rounded appearance, while the lower chord extends in a straight line from pier to pier. The struts, batter posts, eye beams, uprights, braces and the other structural steel shapes are connected with these, the top chord holding the bridge up. The work was performed simultaneously from both piers, thirty-foot sections being built at a time. So carefully had the shore braces been placed that it was a simple matter for the shore piers to hold the immense weight of the steel frames. When sufficient steel shapes had been placed in position, travelers, higher than the towers, were erected at either end of the bridge. These travelers performed the same work as a derrick, the dozens of ropes suspending from them being kept busy lifting the steel frames from barges in the river to their proper places on the structure. Sometimes it would be necessary to hold one of these frames in position for several days until the contains 7000 tons of steel, the total cost when completed being $1,000,000. There is about 15,000 tons of steel in the entire bridge. Although the Firth of Forth of Scotland contains two channel spans 700 feet long, and two anchors 685 feet each, and is the largest bridge in the world, that of the Wabash is regarded as one of the finest specimens of its kind in the world.

SUBMARINE PLEASURE BOAT.

Craft Designed For the Entertainment of Pleasure Seekers.

Feeling that there is a craving on the part of the general public for the sensation to be experienced in a trip under the water, an inventor has designed to gratify this desire by building a perfectly safe craft in which the most timid may trust himself without fear.

The vessel is to be furnished with a needed supply of air by means of a unique arrangement which will serve a dual purpose, as will be explained.

THE SUBMARINE PLEASURE CRAFT.

The boat is not intended to make extensive trips, but merely to carry its passengers beneath the water, and in a comparatively short passage give them all the sensations of speeding along at an immense rate.

Though the boat is to be drawn by a cable on a railway laid at the bottom of a lake or pond, a propeller revolving at a high rate of speed and an enormous column of bubbles blown into the water from the air chamber will cause the passengers looking through the little glass-covered portholes to imagine that they are making a record run.

Chicago 25.—A Tientsin despatch to the Daily News states that officials arriving from the seat of war assert that the battle of Nisinting was the most sanguinary since the commencement of the war, the Russians sustaining the greatest defeat at that place. According to official count the Russians lost 10,000 men killed wounded and prisoners. That the Russians' retreat was not converted into a disastrous defeat was due solely to the desperate courage of the Siberian rifles under General Kondratschik, who covered their comrades' rear, disputing each foot of land gained by the victorious Japanese.

London 25.—The Japanese Legation here received from Tokio this evening a despatch stating that a detachment of the army of Takushan, attacked a Squadron of Russian horse at a point 20 miles north-east of Santiao Kow, on the road to Talez Kiao. The battle took place on the 24th. The Japanese occupied the heights at the north and drove the Russians out. The enemy left 60 dead on the field.

Tokio 25.—Admiral Togo reports as follows: "On Thursday last our patrol boats discovered near the entrance of Port Arthur the battleship 'Peresviet' and seven other ships accompanied by nine torpedo boats. I was immediately advised by wireless telegraphy and dispatched my squadron with the exception of those ships detailed for special work. We discovered the Russian fleet consisted of six battleships, five cruisers, and fourteen destroyers. Their intention was to sail southwards as soon as the sun had set. Our destroyers immediately attacked the Russian fleet. One of our torpedoes sunk a battleship of the 'Peresviet' type, and another damaged one of the 'Sebastopol' type. We also crippled a cruiser of the 'Diava' type; these latter were towed into the interior harbor. Our fleet suffered very little damage. The destroyer 'Skirakumo' was struck by a shell which entered the saloon, killing three and wounding a similar number. The 'Chidova' also was struck in her machinery but no lives were lost. Torpedo boats 64 and 67 were damaged slightly.

Petrograd 25.—The Japanese forces are now 12 miles from Port Arthur. Every boy of 15 years of age has been compelled to take up arms. The women are helping to complete the fortifications.

Head Quarters of Gen. Kuroki, 25.—A division of Russian cavalry under General Renskamp attempted to oppose the right flank of the Japanese. Owing to the hilly nature of the country the cavalry operations failed. The district however is ideal for infantry.

St. Petersburg 26.—The Government has direct information of the naval battle which took place above Port Arthur on the 23rd. This news however has caused no surprise because it is known that Vice Admiral Wilkott, chief of the naval forces at that place was ready to sail. In military circles the opinion is unanimous that the Japanese intend to attack Kuropatkin. It is hoped that Kuroki and Oker will make separate advances. The difficulty of transporting provisions is increasing. Mischinko's mission, which had for its object the impeding of the junction of the two forces, was a complete failure. The 'Russi' announces that the Tongusos are increasing their numbers; all their movements are directed by Japanese officers fully occupying General Renskamp's forces. The Chinese are doing all they can to embarrass the Russian movements, destroying corn, wheat and rice.

Tokio 27.—Admiral Togo supplements his report of the naval battle as follows: "On the 23rd the battleships 'Peresviet', 'Poltava' and 'Sebastopol', and the cruisers 'Bayan', 'Pallada', 'Diava', 'Novick' and 'Askold' proceeded by several steamers for laying mines left Port Arthur. Shortly after the 'Czarvitch', 'Rivision' and 'Povido' joined them. Our fleet attacked them at 3 p.m. One of the Russian ships took fire and blew up in the inner harbor. When the enemy was five miles from the port I ordered the torpedo fleet to attack them. The 14th division commenced the attack and the 5th division attacked their rear; the enemy became demoralized not being able to enter the port; we attacked them eight times. The first torpedo fired, struck a battleship of the 'Peresviet' type and sunk her instantly. The darkness prevented us from observing the damage inflicted until daylight when we discovered that another battleship and two of the 'Sebastopol' and 'Diava' types were also missing. On the 24th the remainder of the fleet escaped inside the harbor.

St. Petersburg 26.—Great rejoicing is going on to-day due to the news that the entire Russian fleet left Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg 1.—From reliable sources it is learned that Kuropatkin has decided upon retreating towards the north in order to compel the Japanese to extend their lines of communication. Kuropatkin does not intend to impede the junction of the two Japanese forces, as he was placed in great danger at the battle which took place on the 27th. A large Japanese force is now near the Russian flank. The following was telegraphed to the Emperor by Kuropatkin, dated Leao Yang 27th: "The Japanese attacked our forces in the passes of Moitin, Ten Shui and Ta. Our infantry and cavalry retired closely pursued by the enemy whose attack at the Ta pass the Japanese guards and other regiments participated and attacked us in front and on both flanks. The Japanese occupied the towns of Tin Shui and Montien on the morning of the 27th. Up to midnight I have not received any particulars."

St. Petersburg 2.—The press consider it remarkable that no particulars has been published in Tokio relative to the last battle. The papers re-produce the most important parts of publications of the German papers, and call attention to the fact that Tago in his despatches does not state positively that he sank one, and damaged two Russian war ships. Much indignation is expressed against Tago for suppressing this, although some are inclined to believe it is the fault of the translators.

Helsing 1.—The losses sustained in the battle near Tatten is not known. On Sunday eighty wounded arrived at Leao Yang and next day two hundred more. The battle lasted from the morning of 26th to the night of the 27th. The Japanese expelled the Russians from three positions. The Russians say that the Japanese have again demonstrated the superiority of their artillery. On the second day of the battle the Japanese brought forward a battery superior to the Russians, whom they compelled to retire in great confusion, leaving a large number of dead and wounded on the field. The Japanese aim was very bad, as many times they bombarded places which had been already occupied by the enemy. One brigade of Russian rifles maintained their position until mid-day in spite of a heavy fire from the Japanese artillery. Finally the defenders were flanked by the cavalry and infantry and a battery was brought against the rear guard of the brigade which compelled them to retire. The Japanese continued bombarding until 4 p.m. At three in the morning of the 27th the battle was renewed. The Russians put out of action two batteries of the enemy, but these were quickly replaced by cannon of larger calibre which destroyed the Russian batteries and compelled them to retire again. When the Japanese cavalry and artillery formed a column and encircled the Russians the carnage was horrible. The Russian forces are encamped on the heights. The enemy have not given Kuropatkin time to fortify his base and flank; nevertheless, the position of Kuropatkin is not as secure as it was before his flank attack, and he cannot surround the Russian position without fighting.

Tokio 2.—Official news state that a battle which lasted all Sunday the Japanese took by assault the fortress of Chick Wan Chan Chih Ansan and So Cho Chan, situated south-east of Port Arthur and forming part of the defences of that place. The attack was an artillery duel; So Cho Chan was first taken and the others shortly after; the Russians retired towards the east leaving forty dead behind. The Japanese forces consisted of artillery, infantry, and cavalry, but their number is not known. The Japanese lost one hundred, including three officers killed.

St. Petersburg 2.—The submarine 'Delphin' with one Lieutenant and twenty men was sunk in the river Neva. After the 'Delphin' had been submerged a tow boat passed, causing the water to strike her heavily; the crew who were all inexperienced men, became panic stricken, and it is supposed one of them opened the periscope to escape, when the water rushed in and she sank like a stone, drowning all hands. News from Cronstadt reports that the protected cruiser 'Neiron Menia' rammed the battleship 'Navarin.' No particulars are given as to how it happened or the extent of her injuries.

Leao Yang 2.—The Japanese column which forced the pass of Moitin has advanced over the Leang. The Russians occupying this position were under General Condankeller. The object of the Japanese was to cut the Russian communication north of Leao Yang.

London 2.—An official despatch from Tokio reports that the Japanese Consul telegraphs: "On the morning of the 30th six Russians entered the port, fired 200 projectiles and sunk one steamer and a lighter, after which they joined three cruisers outside and disappeared."

St. Petersburg 2.—Not a single word has been received from Kuropatkin since the 27th, neither has the press had any despatches during the last twenty-four hours. The silence from the seat of war is considered of grave import as it indicates a tempest shortly. The 'Bourse Gazette' says: "We are on the eve of a battle which perhaps will decide the fate of Manchuria and Corea, both of which will effect Russia."

Chefu 2.—Fifty Europeans have arrived at Pigeon bay from Port Arthur which place they left on the 22nd. They state that the battleship 'Sebastopol' is badly damaged, but that fifteen days will be sufficient to repair her. They also confirm the report that a war ship of the 'Peresviet' type was sunk. When the Russian fleet left Port Arthur, the inhabitants had great hopes, but when they returned with some missing, their rejoicings were changed. It is said that the sailors have no confidence in Admiral Weckoff. It is believed that when Skrydloff arrives, the fleet will sail out and attack the Japanese. It is said that the Russian fleet consists of six battleships, five cruisers and twenty-four torpedo boats and destroyers.

Seoul 2.—It is learnt here that the Vladivostok squadron appeared off Gimsan on the 30th and fired at least 200 shots in the town. Three cruisers and ten destroyers took part in it.

Hai Ching 2.—The Japanese continue to advance towards Suyen and Fing Wang Ching. General Oker is also advancing towards the north. Sansonoff is disputing his march, but has offered no serious resistance. A Japanese force of three regiments and about ten batteries of artillery have advanced to the Moitin pass. Another force of equal strength has reached the Leao Tung. The flank of his force is protected by a column marching from Siamatz.

The General Penitentiary Is Overcrowded.

THE DISTRICT PRISON. From "Daily Telegraph." It was announced in the "Daily Telegraph" a few months ago that owing to the congested state of the St. Catherine District Prison, the Government has decided to send prisoners sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from six months and upwards to the General Penitentiary instead of Spanish Town.

It would now appear that owing to the large number of convicts arriving there from day to day, the Penitentiary was also become overcrowded which necessitates arrangements being made to accommodate the prisoners.

As the District Prison is still overcrowded, it appears according to this state of affairs, that crime is on the increase in the island.

Terrible Accident in Jamaica.

THIRTY-THREE LIVES LOST. Kingston Jamaica 28.—This morning thirty-three persons perished near Spanish Town through carelessness or an error. Nearly 100 workmen were sent to clear the sand from the principal conductor of the West India Electric Company's pipe. This enormous pipe conducts the water of the Rio Cobre to operate the Dynamis of the Company. The work was practically complete when an order was given to send a small amount of water through. By an error, or a wrong order, the entire force of water was turned through the pipe. Several of the men escaped through different openings but thirty-three were drowned.

CHRONIC DIARRHOEA.—For several years during the summer months I have been subject to looseness of the bowels, which quickly ran into a very bad diarrhoea and this trouble frequently accompanied with severe pain and cramps. I used to call on doctors for my trouble but it became so recurring a summer affliction that in my search for relief, I became acquainted with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which proved so effective and so prompt that I came to rely exclusively upon it, and what also happily surprised me was that while it almost instantly relieved the cramps and stopped the diarrhoea, it never caused constipation. I always take a bottle of it with me when travelling.—H. C. HARTMAN, ANADAMA, IOWA, U.S.A. For sale by INTERNATIONAL PHARMACY, LIMON.

MATINA NOTES.

What promises to be a very enjoyable Service of Song will come off at the Baptist Church here during the month of August. Messrs. P. A. Samuels and L. A. Gordon are earnestly engaged in practising the Choir.

On Sunday last the Service at the Anglican Church here was presided over by Mr. Price, Layman of the St. Mark's Church, Limon. He preached an instructive sermon which was listened to with marked attention.

An evening of songs and recitations will be given at Chirripo by the Choir and friends of the Anglican Church at Zent Junction. They hope to have a splendid time.

Mr. J. E. Heslop has been confined to his bed since last week owing to an attack of Malarial fever. We hope he will soon be convalescent.

The members of the Order of Good Samaritans will give a grand entertainment some time in August. Full particulars respecting it will be noted later on.

Terrible Accident in Jamaica.

THIRTY-THREE LIVES LOST. Kingston Jamaica 28.—This morning thirty-three persons perished near Spanish Town through carelessness or an error. Nearly 100 workmen were sent to clear the sand from the principal conductor of the West India Electric Company's pipe. This enormous pipe conducts the water of the Rio Cobre to operate the Dynamis of the Company. The work was practically complete when an order was given to send a small amount of water through. By an error, or a wrong order, the entire force of water was turned through the pipe. Several of the men escaped through different openings but thirty-three were drowned.
