England's Future King

Plans for the education of the Prince of Wales

He Will Take a Short Course at Oxford and Then Make a Tour of the British Empire, To Be Treated When at College Just Like Any Other Student.

An obviously authoritative statement has been published dealing with the future career of the Prince of Wales.

The young Prince will complete his course of training in the senior division of the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, next April. It was at that suggestion that he should accompany the King and Queen on their visit to India at the end of the present year but this idea has been abandoned. As soon as he leaves Dartmouth the Prince will begin to read for a short university career and he will probably enter Christ Church, King Edward's old college, in the autumn.

He will not remain at Oxford for the regulation four years, two years being the utmost that can be spared for this portion of his training. Rooms are shortly to be fitted up for him at Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle, and his studies will be directed by his present tutor, Mr. Hansell, aided by various professors. The Prince, it is stated, is already well up in the subjects necessary for matriculation and he is expected to pass his entrance examination with ease.

While he is at Oxford the Prince of Wales will lead a regular life and will be subject to the same discipline and routine as any other undergraduate. A special series of rooms will be provided and furnished for him and he will have his own tutor, but this will be the limit of the exceptions made in his favor.

The King is very firm on this point and so long as any of his sons are being educated he is determined that their rank shall not assist them and that they must succeed or fall on their merits. This much he has made clear to his family on more than one occasion.

An illustration of this was given shortly after the Prince of Wales was entered as a cadet at the Junior section of Royal Naval College at Osborne. He was invited to a garden party one afternoon, and was very anxious to attend. To his disgust, however, he was refused permission to be present by the authorities of the college, on the ground that his attendance was necessary at a special class of instruction that was to be held that day.

In high dudgeon, Prince Edward, as he then was, wrote a letter of complaint to his father. The King at once inquired into the true condition of affairs, and when he was informed of the circumstances his reply to his eldest son was at once short and decisive. He saw no reason, he said, in effect, to interfere in the matter. His son had to learn as quickly as possible that he was at the college merely as a cadet and not as a royal Prince, and that the rules that applied to his comrades applied with equal force to himself. It was his place to set an example to the other boys by a cheerful obedience to orders, however irksome the task might be, and not to look for special favors because of his high birth.

This taught the young Prince a very salutary lesson, and he has never complained to his father since of any duty that has been assigned to him.

The Prince is stronger in mathematics than in classics. Though a great reader he has no great liking for the dead languages, but greatly prefers modern history and biography. He has some command of modern tongues and can already speak French and German with a tolerable amount of proficiency. Mathematics is a very strong subject, and in it he carries of the palm at both Osborne and Dartmouth, the two naval training establishments.

When his university course is at an end the Prince of Wales will set off on a tour of the British Empire, accompanied by his brother Prince Albert. The precedent of the similar tour undertaken by the present King and the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale in the cruiser Bacchante will be very closely followed. Since that time, however, the empire has expanded to an extent hardly to be conceived, and it is estimated that at least twelve months will be necessary for the Prince to gain even the most cursory knowledge of the great dominions over which their father rules.

As was the case in the tour of the King a cruiser will be specially fitted up for the accommodation of the Prince, and this will probably be of the Indomitable type. The Prince will be attended by a rather large suite, including distinguished representatives of the army and the navy.

Precedent lays it down most emphatically that the heir apparent to the British throne shall be closely identified with the army. This is to be adhered to in the case of the Prince of Wales. Prince Albert on the other hand is destined to follow in the footsteps of his father and to become in due course a sailor Prince.

Therefore when the Prince returns from their tour round the world the Prince of Wales will be at once gazetted to one of the regiments of cavalry of the line then stationed in this country.

The life of the Prince of Wales in the army will be that of any other subaltern. He will have his own quarters and his own servants, and that is all. Though attached in the first place to the cavalry he will in due course be acquainted with the duties of the various other branches of the service, such as the Royal Artillery and the Royal Engineers. It is the earnest desire of both the King and the Queen that their eldest son shall be a soldier in something more than name, and no effort will be spared to insure this.

The great wish of the Queen is that the Prince of Wales may remain a boy as long as possible. Consequently he is not to be allowed to undertake any public duties whatever until after he has attained the age of 18—when royalty legally comes of age in this country.

Food for an ocean giant

It will Cost Some $60,000 Every Time to Stock the Olympic or the Titanic

Some $60,000 worth of American food and drink will be loaded aboard the new ocean steamers Olympic and Titanic each time one of these big boats docks in New York, according to the commissary officers who are victualing such ships. Should the Government make their landing here possible by lengthening two of the Clevelea piers these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage in addition to a crew of 800. If both boats are able to begin their regular trips here next spring to the Clevelea piers these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage in addition to a crew of 800. If both boats are able to begin their regular trips here next spring to the Clevelea piers these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage in addition to a crew of 800. If both boats are able to begin their regular trips here next spring to the Clevelea piers these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage in addition to a crew of 800.

For meals alone $15,000 is to be paid each time either of the big sister ships comes into port. Large quantities of beef, lamb, pork, veal and mutton will be brought from all over the country and stacked away in refrigerators that must hold enough to feed 3,500 people on a transatlantic voyage. Wagonloads of poultry costing $5,400 are to be added to this array, with piles of fish worth $2,000. For shellfish, the orders of the ship's cooks will amount to $1,200 in addition.

Farmers from all about the neighboring country will be called upon to send $4,600 worth of butter, cream and milk to be used on each trip of these big boats, while $1,800 is also to be spent solely for eggs and $3,200 for vegetables. Fruits worth $3,500 are to be added to the ship's stores, while its bakery will lay in flour to the extent of $2,300 on each voyage. The biggest bill next to that for meats will be $5,500 for all sorts of groceries.

Far away in the frigid depths of the new liners' cold storage compartments $1,300 worth of ice cream is to be stored, and for cigars $2,000 will be spent. Wines and spirits costing $5,000 are set down as necessary for each shipment of passengers, together with some $3,000 worth of beer and mineral waters. Altogether the lowest cost of victualing such boats as the Olympic and Titanic is set down as $56,200.

His money or Miss Marquise's

Once Papal Chamberlain, Now Divorced Says Hell Sue the Vatican

Mr. MacSwiney, formerly a papal chamberlain, whose hereditary title of Marquis, a pontifical decoration, was recently annulled by the Pope, threatens to claim from the Vatican the restitution of the $ 6,000 he paid for the marquise and damages, as the annulment is unprecedented in heraldry.

The Vatican refuses to refund the money; which it says does not represent the price of the title but was a charitable contribution made when the donor was a Catholic and hence irrevocable.

Mr. MacSwiney, owing to his divorce and remarriage, is now a Protestant.

Man Hunt

An exciting man hunt took place on Sunday morning in the vicinity of the dairy of Don Carlos Saborio. In a previous issue we mentioned that several of the men accused of robbing the railway material had been liberated on bail, one of them named Walker was surrendered by his surety to the Criminal Judge on Saturday morning in due form but the party neglected to demand the return of his bond, it is said that the Judge gave Walker permission to look up another surety but neglected to give him police escort. Walker immediately decided to take advantage of the oversight and disappeared. Every effort to locate him during the day proved unavailing. On Sunday morning information was given to Mr. Sanderson that Walker was in hiding in the room of a man named Bowers, an employee of the United Fruit Company. Accompanied by a policeman and a friend Sanderson searched Bowers' room but the bird had flown, several of Sanderson's friends then took up the scent and Walker was located in another room on the same building where he had gone after leaving Bowers' place. The amateur detective force again started for the locality, dividing their forces in two; Walker, however had again been warned and skirting the rear of the dairy made tracks for Cinagueta with the hounds in full chase. The fugitive was sighted within a few yards of the beach where the boats were haled up for which place he was heading under full steam. He was promptly brought to a halt and arrested, when taken to the Cuartel he stated that he was on his way to the Judge to acquaint him that he had secured another surety. The police decided that they could not detain him in the Cuartel over half an hour as they had an order for his liberation two days previously which had not been rescinded, the Criminal Judge was immediately informed and the necessary order for his detention was given.

Walker is now taking his second term in the College; the action of Walker will, no doubt, have its effect of preventing others becoming security of evil doers.

Current News.

In consequence of the resignation of Mr. Minor C. Keith of the General Managership of the United Fruit Company, Mr. Skimmerhorn has been appointed to that post. Accompanied by Mr. Hubbard, the Treasurer of the Company the new General Manager is due to arrive here on Sunday last, a tour of inspection. Mr. Skimmerhorn's title is said will be $ 30,000 per annum. Mr. Hitchcock remains as Manager of the Company for the Costa Rica Division.

James Durham, late head nurse of the United Fruit Company's hospital was apprehended on Sunday last and placed in the Cuartel to await the pleasure of the higher authorities, when he will be formally charged. From information we gather Durham was up to a couple weeks ago employed as chief nurse at the hospital and was in receipt of a decent salary; but he subsequently relinquished that job for a more lucrative one, that of Baggage Master of the northern railroad. Limon, vice Bultrago, As Baggage Master he handled daily a goodly sum of money and on Saturday last when called upon to give an account of the day's transaction it was discovered that he was short of cash to the extent of over $ 60. Up to the time of writing the man was still locked up.

We are pleased to learn from good authority that our professional nurse and midwife Mrs. G. C. Solomon will soon return from Jamaica, whither she went to accompany her husband.

A black woman was caught in the act of stealing rice and pass yesterday from the stall of a Syrian woman in the market. She went on to the stall just as it was wanted, something to purchase, standing up in front of where the rice and pass was she m-n and again held herself to these 20 articles, putting them in a bag she had suspended before her. She was discovered by the owner who called a policeman and put her in a cage. A note was sent the chief of police and a few minutes after it was liberated.

Literature in England

According to reports from publishers there is a decided growth in the popularity of serious literature in England. During the last year there was a slight check to the flood of novels, there being an actual decrease in the number published compared with the year before, 1,806, as against 1,839, while there was a decided increase in the number of serious books. The total number of works issued was seventy-nine more than in the previous year.

The chief increases during 1910 may be summarized as follows: Poetry and drama, 115; travels, 71; social science, 64; art and science, 53, and religion and philosophy, 42.

A well known book-keeper said recently that he had sold fewer six shilling novels than ever before. The sixpenny novel was in great demand, but the more expensive edition of a new story had greatly declined in sales.

American passport not respected

In the gathering of the Union American Hebrew Congregation held in New York recently a Mr. Louis Marshall called attention to the shameful disregard which the Russian Government makes to the passports issued by the United States Government to citizens of the Hebrew race who might desire for one reason or another to visit Russia. No matter how many credentials an American citizen of Hebrew extraction possesses, no matter how prominent he may be at home, and no matter even if he be American-born, he is not permitted to cross the Russian frontier. This unfair treatment, Mr. Marshall thinks, is tantamount to the denial of the States and a violation of the treaty which exists between the two countries. This treaty guarantees to the citizens or subjects of each contracting party the right to travel in the territory of the other, provided that such subjects or citizens are amenable to the local laws of the places which they visit or in which they reside. As the United States makes no distinction of race or religion in the matter of citizenship, the action of Russia in admitting some Americans and excluding others is a direct violation of the treaty.

The treatment of the Jews in Russia has long been a source of protest from the civilized world, but the Russian Government has been able to ignore all such criticism on the ground that its domestic affairs are not the concern of other people, but when any class of American citizens are excluded from entrance into Russia, which is guaranteed them by treaty, the matter is one which directly concerns the United States Government and the whole American people. If our treaty with Russia does not procure our citizens the same treatment which Russian subjects demand and receive in the United States, then it is a dead letter, and a source of humiliation to our national pride, hence should be abrogated as speedily as possible. Since our Government takes no cognizance of the religious faith of its citizens, nor even their race, the Russian Government has no right to discriminate. An American passport should be all the credentials that the Russian officials should have a right to demand. To accept some passports and reject others, when all are equally authentic and bona fide, is a direct violation of a solemn treaty, and should be resisted.
