The Coronation Procession

Wireless light

For the benefit of the thousands of Londoners who will be unable to see the coronation procession to Westminster Abbey and the royal procession through the City of London the managers of all the leading London music hall have made arrangements to show the spectacle in moving pictures at their halls on the same evening. To carry out the arrangements successful the London representatives of all the great picture film companies in the world have been among the earliest purchasers on the route.

Facilities for securing good records of the pageant have been acquired at every possible point of vantage and on both days employed. One well known cinematographic house has just completed arrangements for recording the royal processions from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey at every step of the way.

Each camera operator will have an assistant at hand and as he obtains his picture of the passing procession he will slip away and hasten to the firm's headquarters, where everything will be in readiness for immediate development of the pictures. A fleet of motor cars will be in waiting in the side streets off the line of route, and before the King has reached the Abbey the first glimpse of the great spectacle outside the palace gates will be in process of transference to a film several hundred feet in length.

The whole procession will be shown at several London halls that night, and pictures will also be despatched by the late afternoon trains into the provinces in view of exhibition on the evenings of the next day. The demand for the films is enormous, and the staff of this firm will be working continuously night and day for a week in order to meet it. Special films will be exhibited in Paris at the earliest possible moment and orders are coming from the United States and other parts of the world.

It is not possible to obtain any records of the actual scenes within the Abbey, owing to the difficulties of light. Even if the Abbey authorities granted permission no reasonably good results could be obtained owing to the dull light of the Abbey interior.

Wireless light is the latest possibility of the scientific world, according to Mr. Thomas Baker, the expert on wireless telegraphy and electrical science. He says:

"Recent experiments on the neon light, perhaps the chief illuminant in years to come, suggest enormous possibilities in the future lighting of the world. The neon light is simply a long gaseous tube into which is passed a little neon, a very rare, colorless gas. When an electric current of a sufficiently high voltage is passed through this tube it at once becomes luminous, emitting a rich, red light."

"This red light, according to M. Georges Claude, the French scientist, assumes a warm, golden color on the eyes becoming accustomed to it."

"A neon tube sufficient to light a room 40 feet square should cost about $5. Moreover, only half as much electricity is required to light it as an ordinary electric filament lamp of the same candlepower.

"Now, Nikola Tesla, the eminent electrical scientist, has stated that the day will come when enormous wireless generating stations will be erected which will supply electric power for the whole of the world."

"At the present time such an enormous loss of electricity takes place in transmitting energy by wireless that such a scheme would be impracticable."

"When, however, the secret of transmitting electrical energy by wireless is discovered the neon lamp will probably be used for wireless lighting."

A neon tube will glow quite brightly when placed within several yards of a wireless mast when messages are being sent.

"How simple the lighting of houses will become when lit by wireless may be imagined. For instance, around the walls of one's room may be little hooks simply connected by wires with the earth. When darkness comes one merely hangs up a neon light tube and the room is flooded with a soft red glow."

The Man About Town What the Limon Folks are saying

That the railroad company have at last succeeded in sending their trains through to San Jose.

That the inconvenience experienced by passengers transferring their baggage is at an end.

That the company is to be congratulated for the way in which they handled the work during the trying experience.

That the medico acted very inhumane when he knocked down with his cycle the 4 year old child.

That common decency might have prompted him to stop and examine the child to see what damage it sustained so as to attend it.

That the fine imposed on him by the Judge ought to serve as a solitary warning to him and other cycle riders.

That they would like to know what become of the effects of persons dying in the hospital.

That the position as British Vice-Consul in Limon is looked upon by a resident here as an honorary one.

That they do not share this view; but on the contrary is the servant of His Majesty King George.

That as such a Vice-Consul should be a man of independence and should not be under several bosses.

That it is whispered in certain quarters that a move is being made to have a gentleman that is not an employee.

That "Brabantia" the father of the modern "Desdemonas" sprints about town like a lad of 18 years old.

That he seem to be jubilant over the victory he claims he achieved over his unwelcome late visitor.

That we would like to know who came out without a scratch, the "old lad" or the "young one." That the services at St. Mark's church will be conducted by one of the disciples for the present.

That they would like to know if the "Bishop" will take over charge of the congregation's spiritual welfare on his return after the well earned rest.

President Gomez has ratified the appointment of General Monteagudo as commander in chief of all the military forces in the republic, thereby unifying them.

General Armando Riva, now the Havana chief of police, will return to the command of an infantry brigada as before.

Newspapers in Havana and Santiago declare that there are more than 5,000 cases of measles in the latter city and complain of the gross neglect of the sanitary authorities, who, it is asserted, have taken no steps to prevent the spread of the epidemic.

To Represent Jamaica

Five Hundred Pounds to Send A Local Contingent

PARISHES TO GET

The representation of Jamaica at the coming Coronation of His Majesty the King, was brought up in the Legislative Council yesterday, when a message from the General Assembly was read.

His Excellency propose to invite the Council to vote a sum of £ 500 to defray the cost of sending one officer and nine non-commissioned officers to England. It is impracticable now to give names of the members of the contingent to be sent. If the Council pass a Bill to be introduced to give existing Rifle Clubs a legal status as volunteers, about half of the non-commissioned officers of the contingent will be selected from the St. Andrew's Rifle Corps, and the remainder, including a commissioned officer from the J. M. A. In the event of such a Bill not becoming law in time, the whole contingent will be selected from the Militia.

The Government proposes to invite the Council to vote also, £ 750 for the purpose of celebrating the approaching Coronation throughout the island, to be allotted at the rate of £ 30 for expenditure in each parish outside of Kingston, and £ 100 in Kingston. It also proposed to arrange for the formation of local committees in each parish for the purpose of devising arrangements for this celebration.

Fatal Drowning

Captain C. V. Talsen, of the "Mount Vernon," died on Thursday afternoon under the most tragic circumstances. While walking over the gang plank the skipper was seen to reel and fall overboard, the mate quickly plunged in after him and grasped the body which was promptly taken from the water. All efforts to resuscitate were unavailable as the unfortunate man appears to have been dead before he struck the water; the medical verdict stated that death was caused from heart disease. The body was interred at Camp One cemetery on Friday morning.

Limon Literary Association

The General Meeting of the Limon Friendly and Literary Association which was held on Thursday night was well attended, several important matters were dealt with and a number of new applicants for membership admitted. Quite a number of letters of acceptance were received from prominent gentlemen of this town who have been elected honorary members. The phenomenal success of this Association reflects the greatest credit not only on the Revd. Waite Smith who conceived and carried out the idea but on the members themselves who have been entering in their efforts to improve the standing of the Association. Several gifts of books, magazines and papers have been received from gentlemen of high standing in our community, all of whom have promised their support in the future. We wish the Association every success.

Smoking after meals

An English paper says.—Smokers are constantly being told that indulgence in their favourite habit means ruin to their health; and they will be interested in learning that on occasions smoking, so far from being injurious, is positively beneficial. We have it on the authority of a medical correspondent of the "Lancet," that smoking after meals promotes the process of digestion. "The desire for tobacco that is felt by many after a hearty meal, is no doubt due to its stimulating influence on gastric secretion; and the comfort that follows indulgence is in part at any rate, attributable to the extra fill given to digestion." Every smoker knows how his mind goes mechanically to pipe and tobacco as soon as he has finished eating; and it will be satisfactory to the brotherhood to have this assurance that instead of showing the natives signs of a harmful habit, they are really acting in their best interests. That, however, is only in the case of the after meal smoke, is it harmful to smoke before meals, because, says the correspondent, "The pungency of the pyrogenous products contained in tobacco smoke renders the buccal mucosa insensitive to alimentary stimulation; in fact, their effect is to dull or abolish the olfactory gustatory reflex, thus depriving us of what Pavlov calls 'appetite juice.'" Wives who wish to cure their husbands of smoking ought to get that off by heat and quote in often.
